Congressional Workforce Education Committee defends 52 year-old Title IX to protect women sports

Committee Advances Congressional Review Act Resolution to Preserve Protections Undermined by Biden Administration

WASHINGTON, D.C. , June 24, 2024 - As the nation recognizes the 52nd anniversary of Title IX, the landmark protections that have provided women and girls equal opportunities and safe single-sex spaces are under attack, the Committee on Education and the Workforce, chaired by Rep. Virginia Foxx (R-NC), took action to defend the original intent of Title IX.

H.J. Res. 165, a Congressional Review Act resolution to nullify the Biden administration's Title IX rule, passed the Committee with a vote of 24 to 16. Rep. Mary Miller (R-IL) sponsored the legislation. The Biden administration's proposed rule allows men to enter women's and girls' private spaces.

Chairwoman Foxx said this of the resolution: "This resolution does nothing more than reinforce a biological and common-sense reality that we all know deep-down is true.
