Shelby County DA Office salute students who wrote 'Do the Write Thing' essays to advocate against crime

Associate Deputy District Attorney Ernest Brooks (center) is pictured with students and state legislators Sen. Raumesh Akbari (D-Memphis) and Sen. Brent Taylor (R-Memphis). The Shelby County District Attorney's Office and Shelby County Government held a luncheon and "Day on the Hill" for local students who competed in the Do the Write Thing Tennessee Challenge. The event took place Monday, March 4, and allowed students the opportunity to meet with state officials. Local students also met with students from the Jackson/Madison County and Knox County programs. Do the Write Thing is a national writing program for middle school students that positions them as community catalysts as they examine the root causes and impact of youth violence.
