About Rob MacCachren:
Few drivers have won as much, and in as many places, as MacCachren, who has more than 300 career victories, seven overall SCORE Baja 1000 wins, and a class record 21 SCORE Trophy Truck wins. He won three Borg-Warner World Championships at Crandon International Off-Road Raceway and was inducted into the Off-Road Motorsports Hall of Fame in 2011. He is still winning. He and Luke McMillin took the 2024 Baja 1000 overall and finished second in 2025. As this announcement goes out, MacCachren is in Baja preparing for the 59th SCORE Baja 1000 on November 9-15, where he chases his eighth overall win.

TWO Motorsports gives that record the title it has earned: The King of Off-Road. He returns in the #21, the number long tied to his name. It also matches his record 21 SCORE Trophy Truck wins. MacCachren won the CORR Pro 2 championship in 2008, the final season of the original CORR series. He was inducted into the Off-Road Motorsports Hall of Fame in 2011.

About Justin Ward:
Ward's first experience with short course racing came on a whim at Crandon. He left with a love for the racing, the people and what the sport could become. In a few short months he has built TWO Motorsports into a two-truck Pro 2 team with a race shop in northern Wisconsin and a leadership group with deep roots in the sport. He now takes the green flag as MacCachren's teammate.

Monday, November 1, 2026 - "She only loves horses, she'll never love me," Willi Carlisle laments on his loping new single "She Only Loves Horses," a standout from his Tyler Childers-produced double album The Universal Bubba, out this Friday, November 6th via Signature Sounds. But maybe it's not a relationship destined to work out anyways. "Horse people are weird, and dating them is weirder," explains Carlisle. "You ever watch someone in a two-thousand dollar outfit shovel the dung of a fifty-thousand dollar animal? Worse, you ever get hollered at over nothing by someone who whispers sweetly to an animal that just tries to kick them in the head? I'm not a good rider, but I do love watching this silly stuff. It's got good contradictions."

B.A.S.S. continues legacy of conservation leadership with updated "Keeping Bass Alive," a comprehensive guide for anglers

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., November 3, 2026 — For more than half a century, B.A.S.S. has helped lead the way in bass conservation, championing responsible fish care practices that have shaped the sport of competitive bass fishing. Now, the organization is reaffirming that commitment with the release of an updated edition of Keeping Bass Alive, a comprehensive guide to improving fish care and survival during bass tournaments.
Available free of charge on Bassmaster.com, the updated guide incorporates the latest scientific research and proven fish care techniques to help anglers and tournament organizers minimize stress on bass throughout the tournament process, from the moment a fish is caught until it is released back into the water.
First introduced more than two decades ago, Keeping Bass Alive has become an essential resource for the tournament fishing community, helping establish best practices that have been adopted by anglers, tournament directors and organizations across the country.
"Keeping Bass Alive has been the go-to resource on tournament fish care for over 20 years," said Gene Gilliland, B.A.S.S. Conservation Director. "These updated recommendations represent the best scientifically proven practices to help anglers and tournament organizers maximize survival of bass released after tournament weigh-ins."
The updated publication builds upon B.A.S.S.'s longstanding leadership in fisheries conservation. From pioneering catch-and-release practices in competitive fishing to advancing livewell management, fish handling and tournament release procedures, B.A.S.S. has consistently worked to ensure that protecting the resource remains a fundamental part of the sport.
As tournament fishing continues to evolve, so does the science behind keeping bass healthy. The latest edition reflects that evolution, providing practical, research-based guidance that anglers and tournament organizers can incorporate into their fish care routines.
While tournament procedures and equipment have changed dramatically over the years, B.A.S.S.'s conservation philosophy has remained constant: The future of bass fishing depends on the health of the resource.
"Every angler has an obligation to be a steward of the resource that the sport of bass fishing is based — the fish!" Gilliland said. "By following the best possible fish care practices, we can ensure that bass populations remain healthy and the sport can thrive for generations to come."
By making the updated guide available at no cost, B.A.S.S. hopes to extend the reach of these recommendations well beyond its own tournaments, empowering fishing clubs, high school and college anglers, tournament organizations and recreational fishermen to adopt the highest standards of fish care.
The updated Keeping Bass Alive guide is available here. For more information on B.A.S.S. Conservation visit Bassmaster.com.

Wrap-Up: Tigers' offense dominates in 49-22 win over Army... from sports-Military page 3

Davis became the first Memphis duo since Roc Taylor and Brendan Doyle against South Florida in 2023. Memphis also played one of its cleanest games, committing just two penalties, the least since having the same total against West Virginia in the 2024 Scooter's Coffee Frisco Bowl.

Jaylin Carter also had his third-career multi-touchdown game, leading the backfield with 23 carries for 96 yards and two scores. Offensively, Memphis had three receivers (Hayes, Hunter Tipton, Stonka Burnside) with at least five catches and three (Hayes, Tipton, Davis) with at least 75 receiving yards.

Mike Montgomery led the defense again with nine tackles in the game, just ahead of Ellis Jr.'s seven and Dylan Smith and Kadan Spratling with six each. Joseph Head Jr. had the lone sack and tackle for loss for the Tigers, coming in the fourth quarter.

The Tiger defense may not have had the strongest statistics compared to other games, but they held Army to just 45 passing yards, the least since giving up just 39 against Bethune-Cookman in 2023. With two interceptions tonight, the Tigers have forced a turnover in 33 of their last 41 games, creating 75 takeaways in total.

Another streak the Tigers extended was scoring at least 15 points in their 91st straight home game, the second-longest active streak in the FBS and the fourth-longest streak overall since 1978, scoring 49 tonight. Those 49 points are also the most that the Tigers have ever scored against a service academy, with the previous high being 44 against Navy in 2024.

Memphis (7-2, 4-1 American) has an off week before yet another early matchup, traveling to the Sunshine State for a Thursday night game against South Florida (6-2, 2-2 American) on Nov. 12 at 7 p.m. CT on ESPN.

The Bulls have a road matchup at East Carolina prior to hosting the Tigers.
